DISTRICT ADMINISTRATOR NATIONALLY RECOGNIZED AS AN INNOVATIVE TECHNOLOGY EDUCATOR

Converge Magazine has recognized Julie Bowline, Director of Instructional Technology and Library Services, as one of 50 innovative technology educators in the U.S. Bowline has played an instrumental role in creating two successful online programs for students who have dropped out of school. Bowline has also worked tirelessly to ensure technology standards are integrated into content area standards for all students PK-12.

Through a combination of district funds, ARRA funds and donations from the Five Star Education Foundation, the district has been able to transform schools into 21st-century learning environments. Student engagement has risen dramatically as teachers explain concepts using high-quality images that students can easily see.

Because of Bowline's work, the district has switched from a face-to-face professional development format to a blended learning model. By offering a variety of training opportunities the district is reaching more teachers which in turn reaches more students.

For more information contact Julie Bowline at 720-972-4000.

ADAMS 12 RECOGNIZED AS LEADER IN GOVERNMENTAL PURCHASING

The district has earned the Merit Award of Appreciation from U.S. Communities Government Purchasing Alliance. The award recognizes governmental agencies that consistently take advantage of the savings and best practices intrinsic to the national cooperative purchasing program.

More than 45,000 public agencies are registered with U.S. Communities. Since its inception, the U.S. Communities has saved local agencies more than $1.3 billion. National Institute of Governmental Purchasing recognized the district for its ongoing commitment to maximizing the value of every tax dollar.
